Faculty Scholarship at Whitworth

WHO WE ARE

The Whitworth faculty comprises 154 Christian teacher-scholars who engage in research, writing, and creative performance to advance their understanding of the world, to enrich their teaching, to share their discoveries, and to bring new information and insights into their classrooms. Organizations beyond our campus recognize the high quality of our faculty scholarship; many support Whitworth research programs. Whitworth faculty members have received grants from a broad range of funders including federal grants from the National Science Foundation, the National Institutes of Health and the U.S. State Department's Fulbright program; state funding from the Office of the Superintendent of Public Instruction; support from private regional and national foundations such as the M. J. Murdock Charitable Trust and the Lilly Endowment; and funding from local corporate foundations including Spokane Teachers Credit Union and The Principal Financial.

WHAT WE DO

Whitworth faculty members are engaged in a wide array of research programs, creative production and performance, and scholarly projects. Work in scientific areas ranges from research into the early blood development of zebrafish to spaceflight propulsion to the link between depression and epilepsy. Applied science topics include the rehabilitation of chronic ankle instability. Mathematicians investigate subjects ranging from math, God, and politics in 19th-century Italy to the application of mathematics to sleep research. Scholars in the humanities publish poetry, examine the work of Franciscans in China, explore Northern Ireland's 'Troubles' cinema, and examine intellectual virtues. Theologians discuss the biblical basis for creation care, explore 'wisdom literature' and its meaning in the 21st century, and explore the work of Teresa of Avila. Social scientists compare religious and secular HIV-prevention NGOs in Kenya and present on hope in a consumerist culture. Faculty in the arts perform, contribute to exhibits, write about microcontrollers and music, create arrangements for jazz ensembles, and compose hymns. Economists write about household economics, and educators present their research on programs for high-ability learners.

WHY WE DO IT

At Whitworth, teaching and scholarship are not seen as separate and competing spheres. Faculty members model lifelong learning for our students while staying immersed in the joy of discovery and connected to the broader conversations of their academic disciplines. Some faculty members conduct research and write monographs with their undergraduate students in special research programs that mentor students for graduate study. Some address disciplinary problems from explicitly Christian viewpoints as a unique contribution to discussions in the wider academy. And some aid in the integration of new knowledge into governmental policies and social programs to serve humanity. Regardless of faculty members' motivation, their dedication leads to a common outcome: the discovery and synthesis of knowledge to serve humanity.

WHY WE WANT YOU TO KNOW ABOUT IT

The purpose of this annual publication is to share some of the ways in which Whitworth's faculty contributes to the world of knowledge. In the following pages you will read about recent publications, scholarly presentations, professional service, research grants, fellowships and awards. While this publication is not comprehensive, it does highlight the breadth and depth of faculty scholarship at Whitworth as it provides a small taste of the fruitful work of the university's teacher-scholars.
